Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color.

It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color. It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.

Syracuse Residents Demand Jobs on the I-81 Viaduct Project

We, the undersigned, believe that city residents deserve equal opportunity to work on public works projects, especially those that affect their lives. The billion-dollar, publicly-funded I-81 Viaduct Project will significantly impact many struggling Syracuse neighborhoods, particularly those of color.

It is only fair that capable and willing city residents from these neighborhoods benefit from the high-paying I-81 jobs coming to their city.

We, the undersigned, are concerned that the I-81 Viaduct Project will be a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) where union members will fill most of the jobs. The data for the current I-690 Teall Interchange Project, which is a PLA, shows that most of the workers are white and male; only 10% are minority and 6% women. We believe that this data reflects the membership of the local trade unions making it close to impossible for non-union members to work on the project.

Therefore,

We, the undersigned, demand that the New York State Department of Transportation deny the trade unions any Project Labor Agreement (PLA) for the I-81 Viaduct Project unless the trade unions create an effective recruitment and retention system that is inclusive of city residents.
